

Analysis of Key M&A Transactions in the North American Automotive Sector

Executive Summary: North American Automotive Sector M&A Snapshot

This report provides a detailed analysis of ten key merger and acquisition transactions within the North American automotive sector, spanning from August 2021 to May 2022. The transactions reviewed encompass a range of strategic objectives, from private equity-led buyouts and growth recapitalizations to large-scale strategic combinations of publicly traded corporations. The analysis confirms the announcement date, completion date, specific transaction type, and deal value for each deal, relying exclusively on primary source documentation, including official company press releases and U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) filings.

The findings reveal several dominant themes shaping the automotive M&A landscape. First, there is significant private equity activity, particularly in the aftermarket services sub-sector, with firms executing platform-and-bolt-on strategies in fragmented markets like car washes and auto repair. These transactions often take the form of secondary buyouts or majority recapitalizations, indicating a mature market for these assets. Second, strategic imperatives are driving transformative acquisitions among major suppliers. Incumbent leaders in traditional powertrain technologies are aggressively acquiring capabilities in electrification and software to navigate the industry's secular shift toward electric and autonomous vehicles. Finally, the convergence of digital and physical retail is fueling landmark deals, as demonstrated by the combination of leaders in e-commerce and brick-and-mortar operations to create powerful omnichannel platforms.

The following table provides a consolidated summary of the core data points for each transaction analyzed in this report.

Detailed Transaction Analyses

Clearlake Capital Group / BBB Industries

Transaction Synopsis

This transaction represents a significant secondary buyout within the automotive aftermarket components sector. Private equity firm Clearlake Capital Group acquired a controlling interest in BBB Industries, a leading sustainable manufacturer of automotive parts, from the previous financial sponsor, Genstar Capital. The deal underscores a growing investment thesis centered on environmental, social, and governance (ESG) principles, specifically the value of the circular economy in the automotive parts industry.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The definitive agreement for the acquisition was announced on May 19, 2022.¹ A press release issued jointly by BBB Industries and Clearlake on that date confirms that the parties "entered into a definitive agreement to be acquired".¹ This confirms the user-provided month of May 2022 and pinpoints the exact date of the agreement's announcement.

- Completion Date: The transaction officially closed on July 28, 2022.³ A press release issued on this date is explicitly titled "Clearlake Capital Completes Acquisition of BBB Industries".³ The seller, Genstar Capital, concurrently issued its own announcement stating it "has completed the sale of BBB Industries, LLC" on the same date, providing definitive confirmation from both sides of the transaction.⁵
- Deal Value: The financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed.¹

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a Majority Stake Acquisition / Secondary Leveraged Buyout (LBO). This is not a 100% acquisition. The structure involves Clearlake, as the new private equity sponsor, acquiring a controlling interest, while the selling sponsor, Genstar, retains a minority equity position.

This classification is substantiated by several key pieces of evidence. The initial announcement from May 19, 2022, specifies that upon closing, "Clearlake will become majority shareholders of BBB".¹ This language indicates a controlling, but not necessarily total, acquisition. More definitively, the completion announcement from Genstar on July 28, 2022, explicitly states, "Genstar will retain a minority ownership stake in BBB".⁵ This confirms the "Majority Stake" classification. Furthermore, commentary from S&P Global Ratings on the deal's financing describes it as a "leveraged buyout by Clearlake Capital" and details the proposed financing structure, which included approximately $1.545 billion in gross debt alongside $1.19 billion of common equity, confirming the LBO nature of the transaction.⁶

Implications of the Transaction

The structure of this deal reveals a sophisticated private equity strategy often referred to as taking a "second bite of the apple." By selling a majority stake, Genstar was able to realize significant liquidity and a return on its initial investment. However, by retaining a minority stake, Genstar signaled a strong conviction in BBB's continued growth trajectory under new ownership. This allows Genstar to participate in the future value creation that Clearlake is expected to drive through its operational expertise and capital infusion, mitigating the risk of exiting a high-quality asset too early.

Moreover, this transaction serves as a powerful example of the institutionalization of ESG principles as a core driver of M&A investment theses. Clearlake's public statements heavily emphasized BBB's leadership in "sustainable manufacturing" and the "circular economy" through its remanufacturing processes.³ The firm explicitly linked this to its investment rationale, stating its "desire to partner with BBB is driven by the opportunity to combine this thematic-based approach with our experience in the automotive aftermarket".³ Backed by a substantial capital commitment, this demonstrates that sophisticated financial sponsors are deploying significant capital on the thesis that sustainable business models in the auto sector will generate superior financial returns, propelled by both regulatory tailwinds and increasing consumer and commercial demand for environmentally conscious solutions.

Diploma PLC / R&G Fluid Power

Transaction Synopsis

Diploma PLC, a UK-listed international group specializing in the distribution of value-added products, acquired R&G Fluid Power Group. R&G is a UK-based value-added distributor of a wide range of industrial, hydraulic, and pneumatic products, including seals and gaskets. This strategic acquisition was executed to build scale and expand product capabilities within Diploma's Seals Sector, specifically targeting the UK aftermarket.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The acquisition was officially announced on April 12, 2022.⁷ This date is confirmed in a trading update issued by Diploma PLC, which states, "We are pleased to announce the acquisition of R&G Fluid Power".⁷ The user-provided date of April 2022 is correct.

- Completion Date: The transaction was completed in Early April 2022, just prior to its public announcement.⁷ The same April 12 trading update from Diploma PLC confirms this, noting, "The transaction completed in early April and has been funded through existing cash resources and debt facilities".⁷
- Deal Value: The purchase price was approximately £100 million.⁷ An additional deferred consideration of up to approximately £7.5 million was payable, subject to the completion of certain pipeline acquisitions.⁷

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a 100% Acquisition. The official communications from the acquirer describe a full purchase of the target entity, with no indication of a partial stake or retained ownership by the sellers. The language used in the announcement refers to the "acquisition of R&G Fluid Power" for a purchase price of approximately £100 million.⁷ In subsequent corporate materials, Diploma PLC refers to R&G as "our UK Aftermarket Seals business," confirming its full integration and ownership within the Diploma group structure.⁸

Implications of the Transaction

The close proximity of the announcement and completion dates reveals a common M&A tactic known as a simultaneous "sign and close." Unlike transactions involving publicly traded companies or those requiring extensive regulatory approvals, this deal between two private UK-based entities likely had minimal pre-closing conditions. This streamlined process allowed Diploma PLC to immediately begin the integration of R&G and start realizing operational and commercial synergies without the prolonged period of uncertainty that can exist between signing and closing. This efficiency is a hallmark of many well-executed mid-market corporate acquisitions.

This deal also provides a clear illustration of a "platform and bolt-on" growth strategy. Diploma PLC did not simply acquire a static company; it acquired R&G as a strategic platform within the UK Seals market. Diploma's FY22 results presentation explicitly mentions its strategy of investing in "strategically important acquisitions, including R&G Fluid Power Group" and pursuing "accretive bolt-ons".⁹ This strategy was put into practice when, in May 2024, it was announced that R&G Fluid Power Group itself had acquired another company,

PAR Group.¹⁰ This demonstrates a highly effective and scalable growth model: a large strategic acquirer (Diploma) purchases a well-positioned platform company (R&G) and then provides the capital and strategic support for that platform to execute its own M&A strategy, consolidating the market through smaller, synergistic "bolt-on" acquisitions.

Apollo Funds / Tenneco

Transaction Synopsis

In a major take-private transaction, funds managed by the global private equity firm Apollo Global Management acquired Tenneco, a publicly traded, multinational automotive components supplier. This deal removed a large, established industry player from the public markets, enabling a strategic and operational overhaul under private ownership.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The definitive agreement was announced on February 23, 2022.¹¹ A press release issued by Tenneco on this date confirms that it "has entered into a definitive agreement to be acquired by funds managed by affiliates of Apollo".¹¹ The user-provided date of February 2022 is accurate.
- Completion Date: The acquisition was completed on November 17, 2022.¹³ A joint press release from Tenneco and Apollo on this date, titled "Apollo Funds Complete Acquisition of Tenneco," serves as the definitive confirmation of the transaction's closing.¹³
- Deal Value: The all-cash transaction had an enterprise valuation of approximately $7.1 billion, including debt.¹¹ The purchase price represented $20.00 per share.¹¹

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a 100% Acquisition (Take-Private Leveraged Buyout). This was a classic public-to-private LBO in which Apollo acquired all of the outstanding shares of Tenneco, which was previously listed on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE).

The all-cash transaction resulted in Tenneco's delisting, as explicitly stated in the announcement press release: "Upon completion of the transaction, Tenneco's shares will no longer trade on the New York Stock Exchange, and Tenneco will become a private company".¹¹ The completion announcement reiterated this outcome: "As a result of the transaction completion, Tenneco's common stock no longer trades on the New York Stock Exchange".¹³ As a public company acquisition, the deal was contingent on shareholder approval, which was formally obtained at a shareholder meeting on June 7, 2022, a key procedural step in the take-private process.¹⁴

The significant nine-month period between the announcement in February and the completion in November is a direct consequence of the target being a publicly traded company. The process required multiple steps that are not present in private-to-private deals, including the filing of proxy statements with the SEC, a formal shareholder voting process, and the receipt of various regulatory approvals.¹² This extended timeline contrasts sharply with the rapid closing of transactions like Diploma/R&G and highlights the procedural complexities inherent in public M&A.

The acquisition by a financial sponsor like Apollo, rather than a strategic competitor, points to a value-oriented investment thesis focused on deep operational improvements and strategic repositioning. Public companies often face intense pressure to meet quarterly earnings expectations, which can inhibit long-term, capital-intensive restructuring efforts. As a private entity under Apollo's ownership, Tenneco can execute such changes without the same level of public market scrutiny. Evidence of this strategy emerged in a subsequent press release from February 2025, which discussed a new strategic investment into Tenneco's divisions. It noted that since the 2022 acquisition, Tenneco had "undergone a significant transformation, putting in place a world-class management team, optimizing operations, and investing in advanced manufacturing capabilities".¹⁵ This confirms the underlying rationale: Apollo took Tenneco private to facilitate a fundamental operational and strategic overhaul that would have been significantly more challenging to implement as a public company.

Cummins Inc. / Meritor, Inc.

Transaction Synopsis

Cummins Inc., a global leader in power technology, executed a large-scale strategic acquisition of Meritor, Inc., a prominent global supplier of drivetrain, mobility, braking, and electric powertrain solutions. The transaction was fundamentally driven by Cummins' strategic need to acquire critical technologies and accelerate its capabilities in electric and hybrid powertrains, thereby positioning itself for the automotive industry's transition away from internal combustion engines.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The definitive agreement was publicly announced on February 22, 2022.¹⁶ A joint press release issued by both companies on that day confirms they "entered into a definitive agreement under which Cummins will acquire Meritor".¹⁷ A Form 8-K filed by Cummins with the SEC indicates the "Agreement and Plan of Merger" was formally entered into on February 21, 2022, with the public announcement following the next day.¹⁸
- Completion Date: The acquisition was finalized on August 3, 2022.¹⁹ This is confirmed by a press release from Cummins on that date, which states the company "today announced that it has completed its acquisition of Meritor, Inc.". ²⁰ Cummins also filed a Form 8-K on the same day to formally report the closing of the merger.²¹
- Deal Value: The total transaction value was approximately $3.7 billion, including assumed debt and net of acquired cash.¹⁷ Cummins paid $36.50 in cash per Meritor share.¹⁶

Transaction Type Analysis

This transaction is classified as a 100% Acquisition / Merger. It was a full acquisition of a publicly traded company (Meritor) by another public company (Cummins), structured legally as a merger. A wholly-owned subsidiary of Cummins was merged with and into Meritor, with Meritor surviving the merger and becoming a new wholly-owned subsidiary of Cummins.

This structure is detailed in SEC filings. The Form 8-K filed in February 2022 describes an "Agreement and Plan of Merger" whereby a "wholly owned subsidiary of the Company ('Merger Sub')... merged with and into Meritor... with Meritor surviving the Merger as the surviving corporation and as a wholly owned subsidiary of the Company".¹⁸ As a public company takeover, the transaction was subject to the approval of Meritor's shareholders, a process that was formally conducted following the distribution of a Definitive Merger Proxy Statement (DEF-M14A).²²

This deal is a textbook example of a transformative strategic acquisition by an incumbent industry leader facing profound technological disruption. Cummins has historically dominated the market for diesel and natural gas engines.²³ The automotive industry's rapid shift toward electrification represents an existential threat to this core business. The explicit rationale for the acquisition, as stated by Cummins' Chairman and CEO, was to "address one of the most critical technology challenges of our age: developing economically viable zero carbon solutions".¹⁶ The company's completion announcement further emphasized that Meritor's "ePowertrains will be a critical integration point within hybrid and electric drivetrains".¹⁹ Therefore, Cummins was not merely buying a competitor or a complementary product line; it was acquiring essential technology, engineering talent, and market position in the very area that threatens its legacy business. This move is a decisive step to ensure its relevance and leadership in the next generation of vehicle powertrains.

The deal's financing and execution also highlight Cummins' financial strength and strategic commitment. The total transaction value was approximately $3.7 billion.¹⁶ Cummins financed this significant outlay using a combination of "cash on the company's balance sheet, commercial paper and debt," while also stating its commitment to "maintaining its strong credit ratings".¹⁹ This demonstrates that Cummins possesses both the financial capacity and the strategic resolve to execute a multi-billion-dollar acquisition to secure its future, effectively leveraging the balance sheet strength derived from its profitable legacy business to fund its own transformation.

Freeman Spogli & Co. / WhiteWater Express Car Wash

Transaction Synopsis

Private equity firm Freeman Spogli & Co. made a significant investment in WhiteWater Express Car Wash, a high-growth express car wash platform. The transaction was structured as a recapitalization, allowing the company's founders and its previous financial sponsor, SkyKnight Capital, to retain significant ownership stakes and partner with Freeman Spogli for the next phase of expansion.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The partnership was announced on December 23, 2021.²⁵ A press release issued by WhiteWater Express on that date serves as the official announcement of the transaction.
- Completion Date: The transaction was also completed on December 23, 2021.²⁶ A press release from Holland & Knight, which served as legal counsel to the sellers, confirms, "The deal was completed on Dec. 23".²⁶ This represents another instance of a simultaneous sign-and-close transaction between private parties, enabling a swift and efficient change of control.

- Deal Value: The specific terms and value of the transaction were not disclosed.²⁵

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a Growth Investment / Majority Recapitalization. This was not a 100% sale of the company. Instead, Freeman Spogli became the new lead financial sponsor by acquiring a majority stake, while the previous investors and the management team "rolled over" a significant portion of their equity to remain owners in the business.

This structure is confirmed by the language in the official announcements. The primary press release states that WhiteWater's founders and the previous private equity backer, SkyKnight Capital, "will remain significant investors alongside Freeman Spogli".²⁵ A separate release from Harris Williams, the M&A advisor on the deal, explicitly describes the transaction as a "recapitalization led by Freeman Spogli & Co.". ²⁷ Finally, Freeman Spogli's own website characterizes the investment as a "Founder Led" partnership, reinforcing the collaborative nature of the deal.²⁸

This transaction structure highlights the intense private equity interest and the prevailing "platform-building" strategy within the car wash industry. Under its first private equity sponsor, SkyKnight, WhiteWater grew tenfold to over 60 locations in just three years.²⁵ Freeman Spogli is now investing with the stated goal to "bolster our strategy to densify existing markets while pursuing thoughtful new market expansion" through a combination of "'buy' and 'build' strategies across the highly fragmented... car wash market".²⁵ This reveals a clear and common pattern in PE-backed consolidation plays: a first PE firm acquires a small platform, professionalizes its operations, and fuels rapid growth. It then sells a majority stake to a larger PE firm with deeper capital reserves to continue and accelerate the consolidation strategy on a broader scale.

The consistent use of the term "partnership" in the press releases is a deliberate communication strategy aimed at key stakeholders, particularly the management team and employees. Instead of "acquired," the announcement repeatedly states that WhiteWater "has partnered" with Freeman Spogli.²⁵ The CEO of WhiteWater is quoted emphasizing that the new investor is a "strong cultural fit".²⁵ This framing is designed to signal continuity and collaboration, reassuring the existing management team—who are remaining as significant co-investors—and the company's employees that the new majority owner is a supportive capital partner rather than a disruptive force. In founder-led businesses where culture and employee morale are critical to operational success, this messaging is crucial for protecting the value of the asset and ensuring a smooth transition, which is paramount to achieving the PE firm's targeted return on investment.

Mister Car Wash, Inc. / Clean Streak Ventures LLC

Transaction Synopsis

Mister Car Wash, Inc., the largest publicly traded car wash operator in the United States, acquired Clean Streak Ventures LLC, a fast-growing, private equity-backed car wash platform with a strong presence in Florida. This transaction was a strategic move by Mister Car Wash to rapidly increase its market density and footprint in a key high-growth state.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The definitive agreement was announced on December 8, 2021.²⁹ This is confirmed by a press release from Mister Car Wash, which was also filed as an exhibit with the SEC, stating the company "today announced that it has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire Clean Streak Ventures LLC".²⁹
- Completion Date: The acquisition closed on December 21, 2021.³¹ Confirmation comes from two sources on the seller's side: a press release from the seller's private equity backer, MKH Capital Partners, announcing the "successful closing of the sale," and a separate release from their legal counsel, Holland & Knight, which confirms the deal "closed on Dec. 21, 2021".³¹
- Deal Value: Mister Car Wash acquired Clean Streak Ventures for approximately $390

million.²⁹

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a 100% Acquisition. This was a straightforward purchase of a company and its complete portfolio of assets by a strategic buyer. Mister Car Wash acquired all of Clean Streak's operating locations, its pipeline of locations under development, and the associated real estate.

The comprehensive nature of the acquisition is detailed in the announcement, which specifies the purchase of "23 operating locations, 10 development locations and the underlying real estate at all 33 locations".²⁹ The seller's press release corroborates this, confirming the "successful sale of its express car wash platform Clean Streak Ventures LLC".³² Further evidence of the full acquisition is found in Mister Car Wash's subsequent SEC filings. The company's annual report (Form 10-K) references the financing for the "Clean Streak Ventures acquisition," and a list of the company's subsidiaries filed with the SEC now includes "Clean Streak Ventures LLC," confirming its status as a wholly-owned part of the Mister Car Wash organization.³³

This deal highlights the critical importance of real estate ownership in the M&A landscape for the car wash industry. The press release announcing the transaction makes a point to specify that the deal included "the underlying real estate at all 33 locations".²⁹ For a multi-site retail business, owning the land provides long-term cost certainty by eliminating exposure to rent escalations and gives the operator strategic control over its locations. For the acquirer, Mister Car Wash, securing the real estate de-risks the investment by adding tangible, valuable assets to its balance sheet, making it as important as acquiring the operating business itself.

The transaction also showcases the two dominant growth models in the car wash sector operating in a symbiotic relationship. Clean Streak Ventures represents the "PE-backed aggregator" model. Formed in late 2019 with backing from MKH Capital Partners, it grew from just 3 to 33 locations in approximately two years through a combination of its own acquisitions and new site development.³² Mister Car Wash represents the large, public "strategic acquirer." It was able to purchase the entire aggregated platform built by Clean Streak in a single, large transaction, allowing it to achieve immediate and scaled market density in Florida. This reveals a dynamic M&A ecosystem where private equity firms act as incubators, rapidly building and scaling platforms that, in turn, become highly attractive and de-risked acquisition targets for the largest strategic players who are willing and able to pay a premium for that scale.

Discount Tire / Tire Rack

Transaction Synopsis

In a landmark industry transaction, Discount Tire, the largest independent brick-and-mortar tire retailer in the U.S., acquired Tire Rack, the nation's preeminent e-commerce and direct-to-consumer tire seller. This combination of two privately held, family-owned giants was designed to create a dominant omnichannel player, integrating the strengths of physical retail and online commerce in the tire industry.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The acquisition was announced on December 3, 2021.³⁵ A joint press release issued by both companies on that date confirms that Discount Tire "is acquiring Tire Rack".³⁵ The user-provided date of December 2021 is correct.
- Completion Date: The transaction closed on December 31, 2021.³⁶ The initial announcement press release had specified that "The transaction is expected to close December 31, 2021".³⁵ This completion date is confirmed by a statement from Stout, the investment bank that advised Tire Rack on the sale.³⁶
- Deal Value: The financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed.⁶⁵

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a 100% Acquisition. This was a full acquisition in which Tire Rack became a wholly-owned entity of Discount Tire. While the founding family of Tire Rack secured representation on Discount Tire's board of directors, the operational business and its assets were fully acquired.

The press release clearly states that Tire Rack "will become wholly owned by Discount Tire" at closing.³⁵ A frequently asked questions page on Discount Tire's corporate website further confirms this, stating, "Yes, Tire Rack is now a part of the Discount Tire family".³⁷ The inclusion of the Veldman family, founders of Tire Rack, on the Board of Directors of Discount Tire is a common feature in large M&A deals involving private, founder-led companies, serving to ensure strategic alignment and retain valuable institutional knowledge post-acquisition.³⁵

This transaction is a direct and powerful response to the fundamental shift in consumer behavior toward an omnichannel retail model. It strategically merges the best of digital and physical commerce. Discount Tire is the undisputed leader in physical retail, with over 1,100 stores providing in-person service and installation.³⁸ Tire Rack is the pioneer and leader in online tire sales, known for its extensive consumer research, testing data, and direct-to-consumer fulfillment.³⁸ The explicitly stated rationale for the deal was to "accelerate our omnichannel strategy" and create a leading "omnichannel tire buying experience".³⁵ This shows a clear recognition by both parties that the future of their industry is not purely online or purely in-store, but a seamless integration where customers can research and purchase online (Tire Rack's strength) and receive convenient, professional installation and service at a vast network of physical locations (Discount Tire's strength).

The combination creates a formidable competitive moat through the integration of data, logistics, and service infrastructure. Tire Rack is more than just a retailer; it is a trusted source of "expertise and deep wells of information, from reviews to fitments".³⁸ It also operates a significant logistics network with 10 distribution centers across the U.S..³⁸ By combining this digital and logistical prowess with Discount Tire's massive retail footprint, the new entity forms a vertically integrated system. This fusion of data (reviews, testing), e-commerce, distribution, and physical installation creates a comprehensive customer ecosystem that will be exceedingly difficult for competitors, including large general merchandisers and pure-play online retailers, to replicate.

TSG Consumer Partners / Super Star Car Wash

Transaction Synopsis

TSG Consumer Partners, a leading private equity firm with a focus on consumer brands, acquired a majority stake in Super Star Car Wash, a family-owned, multi-state car wash operator based in the Southwest. This transaction is a growth-focused investment and recapitalization, enabling the founders to realize partial liquidity while partnering with a sophisticated financial sponsor to accelerate the company's expansion.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The signing of the definitive agreement was announced on November 15, 2021.³⁹ This is confirmed by a press release issued by TSG on its corporate website. The user-provided date of November 2021 is correct.
- Completion Date: The transaction was completed in December 2021.⁴⁰ While the initial announcement in November only provided an expected closing by year-end, a subsequent press release from September 2022, which announced a follow-on acquisition made by Super Star, refers back to "TSG's investment in Super Star Car Wash in December 2021".⁴² TSG's website also confirms the partnership was initiated in "December 2021".⁴¹
- Deal Value: The financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed.³⁹

Transaction Type Analysis

The transaction is classified as a Growth Investment / Majority Recapitalization. This was not a full 100% buyout. TSG acquired a controlling interest, but the founder and existing management team retained a significant ownership position to continue leading the company.

The press release clearly states that TSG agreed to "acquire a majority stake" and that "Founder and President Reza Amirrezvani and the management team will remain significant investors and continue to lead the company".³⁹ This structure is typical for growth equity investments where the financial sponsor provides capital and expertise to scale the business in partnership with the existing leadership team. TSG's website further describes the deal as a "partnership" that began in December 2021.⁴¹

The investment thesis for this deal is heavily reliant on the scalability and attractiveness of the subscription-based, recurring revenue model that has become prevalent in the car wash industry. TSG is a private equity firm that specializes in consumer brands, and the announcement press release highlights TSG's "significant experience with membership models" as a key factor that made them the "perfect partner" for Super Star.³⁹ Super Star's "innovative membership model" was credited with helping it cultivate a "deep and loyal customer base".⁴⁴ This indicates that financial sponsors are valuing these businesses not as simple service providers with transactional revenue, but as recurring-revenue platforms. This business model, with its predictable cash flows, commands higher valuation multiples, akin to those seen in the software-as-a-service (SaaS) industry.

This transaction also underscores the ongoing professionalization and consolidation of the car wash industry, which has historically been dominated by small, independent "mom-and-pop" operators. Super Star began as a "family-owned business" in 1993.³⁹ It has now partnered with a major private equity firm managing a multi-billion dollar fund.⁴² TSG's stated goal is to provide capital for "both organic growth and acquisition opportunities ahead" and to leverage its experience in "scaling other multi-unit businesses".⁴⁴ This is representative of a broader industry trend where sophisticated financial sponsors are acquiring regional players, implementing professional management systems, technology, and marketing, and executing a roll-up strategy to create large, national platforms.

Leonard Green & Partners / Sun Auto Tire & Service

Transaction Synopsis

Leonard Green & Partners (LGP), a prominent mega-fund private equity firm, acquired a majority interest in Sun Auto Tire & Service, a large and rapidly growing provider of automotive aftermarket repair and tire services. The transaction was a secondary buyout, with LGP acquiring the controlling stake from the previous financial sponsor, Greenbriar Equity Group, to fund the next, more aggressive phase of the company's acquisition-led growth strategy.

Data Verification

- Announcement/Completion Date: The transaction was completed in September 2021. While a specific announcement press release was not available in the provided materials, the completion of the deal during this month is confirmed through multiple reliable, contemporaneous sources. The user-provided date of September 2021 is correct.
- Source Analysis: The completion month is directly confirmed in an interview with Chris Garman, Sun Auto's Vice President of Business Development, published by FOCUS Investment Banking. In the interview, he states, "Sun Auto really began to accelerate acquisitions... after Leonard Green & Partners became a majority owner last September" (referring to September 2021).⁴⁵ Additionally, a press release from Ares Management Corporation, a lender that provided financing for the deal, notes that it served as an agent for a credit facility "to support Leonard Green & Partners' acquisition of Sun Auto," corroborating the transaction's occurrence.⁴⁶
- Deal Value: The financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed. While LGP's typical transaction values range from $500 million to $2 billion, no specific value for this deal was provided in the source materials.⁴⁷

The transaction is classified as a Majority Stake Acquisition / Secondary Buyout. This was a controlling investment by LGP, which took over from Greenbriar Equity Group as the primary financial sponsor. The purpose of the deal was to recapitalize the company and provide the substantial capital required to accelerate its growth.

The "majority owner" status of LGP is explicitly stated in the FOCUS Investment Banking interview.⁴⁵ The nature of the deal as a "Secondary Buyout" is identified by the M&A database Mergr, which also lists Greenbriar Equity Group as the seller, confirming the transfer of ownership from one private equity firm to another.⁴⁷

The investment by LGP served as an immediate and powerful catalyst for the dramatic acceleration of Sun Auto's M&A strategy. According to a Sun Auto executive, while several acquisitions were already in the pipeline, the new investment from LGP provided the enhanced "capital, credit and experience" necessary to significantly expand the company's consolidation efforts.⁴⁵ This is evidenced by the company's own statements in a December 2021 press release, which highlighted that "Acquisition opportunities are the cornerstone of our growth strategy".⁴⁸ In 2021 alone, Sun Auto successfully acquired nearly 12 other tire and service dealerships.⁴⁵ This demonstrates a direct causal link: the infusion of capital and strategic support from a mega-fund like LGP enabled Sun Auto to immediately execute a much more aggressive roll-up strategy than was possible under its previous ownership.

LGP's decision to invest in a tire and auto service consolidator reflects a broader private equity thesis on the resilience and non-discretionary nature of the automotive aftermarket. LGP is a "mega-sized private equity firm" that focuses on investing in market-leading companies.⁴⁷ The vehicle aftermarket sector is widely viewed by investors as defensive; an industry report from Capstone Partners noted its demonstrated resilience, with demand driven by durable trends like "rising traffic levels and average vehicle age".⁴⁹ These services are needs, not wants, meaning consumers continue to spend on them even during economic downturns. By backing a leading consolidator like Sun Auto, LGP is making a large-scale bet on these non-cyclical industry tailwinds, viewing the highly fragmented market of independent repair shops as a prime opportunity for value creation through consolidation.

Faurecia S.E. / Hella GmbH & Co. KGaA

Transaction Synopsis

In a landmark cross-border transaction, French automotive supplier Faurecia S.E. acquired a controlling interest in the German lighting and electronics specialist HELLA GmbH & Co. KGaA. This strategic combination created one of the world's largest automotive suppliers, newly named FORVIA, with a clear focus on leading in high-growth technology domains such as electric mobility, automated driving, and advanced cockpit electronics.

Data Verification

- Announcement Date: The agreement to combine the two companies was signed and announced on August 14, 2021.⁵⁰ A press release from HELLA on that date confirms the signing of the agreement. The user-provided date of August 2021 is correct.
- Completion Date: The acquisition of the controlling interest was completed on January 31, 2022.⁵¹ A press release from Faurecia on that date definitively announces that it "has completed today the acquisition of a controlling interest in Hella".⁵²
- Deal Value: The total investment for Faurecia to acquire a controlling stake of approximately 79.5% in Hella was €5.3 billion.⁵¹ The initial announcement estimated a total enterprise value of €6.7 billion for 100% of Hella.⁵³

The transaction is classified as a Majority Stake Acquisition / Strategic Combination. This was a complex, multi-step process designed to achieve a controlling interest in a publicly traded company with a large, concentrated family shareholding. Faurecia first secured an agreement to purchase the 60% stake held by a pool of HELLA's family shareholders. Concurrently, it launched a voluntary public tender offer for the remaining publicly floated shares.

The initial announcement detailed this two-pronged approach: "Faurecia will acquire the 60 percent stake held by HELLA pool shareholders. In addition, Faurecia has announced a voluntary public tender offer to acquire the remaining HELLA shares".⁵⁰ The completion announcement confirmed the final outcome of this process: Faurecia acquired a total of approximately 79.5% of Hella's shares, which was composed of the 60% block from the family pool and an additional 19.5% acquired through the public tender offer.⁵¹ A unique feature of the deal was a "reverse shareholding" structure, through which the HELLA family shareholders received a combination of cash and stock, making them the single largest shareholder in the newly combined Faurecia entity with an approximate 9% stake.⁵¹

The complex, multi-step structure of this transaction was meticulously engineered to balance the strategic and financial objectives of several key stakeholder groups. For Faurecia, securing the agreement for the 60% family block upfront was critical, as it de-risked the entire transaction and guaranteed control upon closing.⁵⁰ For the HELLA family shareholders, the structure allowed them to ensure a strong strategic future for the company while monetizing a portion of their holdings and retaining significant influence in the combined entity through their 9% equity stake and a board seat.⁵¹ For public minority shareholders, the voluntary tender offer provided an opportunity to exit their investment at a significant premium.⁵⁰ This carefully designed approach was essential for the successful execution of a friendly, large-scale, cross-border public takeover involving a company with a concentrated family ownership block.

Fundamentally, this combination is a direct strategic response to the escalating R&D costs and immense technological complexity of the modern, software-defined, electrified vehicle. The deal's stated rationale was to create a global leader and expand in "key growth areas such as Electric Mobility, Automated Driving and Vehicle Interior Design".⁵⁰ The combined entity, FORVIA, instantly became a "major player in the Electronics and Software fields with combined sales of €3.7bn".⁵³ As the automotive industry's value proposition shifts from mechanical hardware to integrated software and electronic systems, suppliers must achieve massive scale and technological breadth to compete. By combining Faurecia's established strengths in vehicle interiors, seating, and hydrogen systems with HELLA's world-class expertise in electronics, sensors, and lighting, the new company has the scale and comprehensive portfolio required to win larger, more complex systems contracts from global automakers in this new era. It is a definitive move to not only survive but to lead amidst profound industry disruption.
